REPAIR: HEALING A DIVIDED NATION

November 11, 2026, New York, NY– Henry Holt & Company announced today that it will publish Wes Moore's next book, billed as a bold interrogation of where America falls short, what we still do right, and how we can fix our broken systems together. REPAIR: HEALING A DIVIDED NATION [Henry Holt & Company; Hardcover; ISBN: 9781250481771; $29.99], was acquired and edited by VP, Executive Editor Tim Duggan from Linda Loewenthal of The Loewenthal Company. REPAIR will be published on March 9, 2027.

Through an honest assessment of the state of our country, Wes Moore gives us a path forward that leaves no one behind. He invites us to examine our nation in full, detailing its faults, lifting up its strengths, and calling us to find a better way forward. Last Tuesday, the country sent a resounding message for a path forward beyond the last decade of political division. REPAIR asks the questions to guide a better way where public servants put the people they serve first. It is a call to action for us to think through what we should keep, and what we must let go, to allow our country to heal to build a fairer and more just society.

Tim Duggan said, "There is nobody quite like Wes Moore in American public life, and this book shows why. He is not only a scholar, a soldier, and a statesman, but he is a writer and thinker of the highest quality. And somehow his voice still comes through in this book like he's sitting down in your living room in your home. His personal story is inspiring, and the stories he tells in REPAIR are completely captivating."

Wes Moore said, “This book is an invitation. I want to welcome readers into a broader conversation about what makes our country great, where we’ve fallen short, and how we build a better future, together. In Maryland, I’ve seen what happens when good people do hard things, even in the face of unimaginable odds. This book documents those stories, as well as other memories of service from my life inside and outside of politics. My goal was never to produce a personal political memoir. It was to pose hard questions and spark honest dialogue. This book is about how we can rediscover our common humanity and relearn our common purpose. I offer my thoughts, with an invitation for readers to lend theirs. In the work of repair, every fingerprint matters.”

Hard times persist for all Americans, and we are in crisis. Trust in government has eroded, and for too many Americans the present feels unsettling while the future appears uncertain. Wes Moore believes that the path forward lies not with institutions alone but with everyday Americans willing to confront hard truths and imagine something better. In REPAIR, he offers a vision for that work, rooted in a series of urgent, clarifying questions: What in our society is broken and must be restored, and what is so broken it cannot be repaired? What needs to be rebuilt from the ground up, and what, though still standing, must finally be dismantled? Just as important, what endures that is worth protecting?

By his account, repair is not revenge or retribution; repair is building, not burning. Repair is understanding that accountability and forgiveness don’t always have to be mutually exclusive, and that there might be seasons for both as long as one doesn’t forbid the other. In an era of division, anger is expected…but unity is radical.

Timely, unpredictable, and captivating, REPAIR is a compelling invitation to write our country’s next chapter.

About the Author:

Wes Moore is the sixty-third governor of Maryland and the first Black governor in the state’s history. Prior to being elected to public office, Moore served overseas in Afghanistan with the 82nd Airborne Division, started and ran his own small business, was CEO of the Robin Hood Foundation, and authored numerous books, including the perennial New York Times bestseller The Other Wes Moore, as well as Five Days and The Work. He holds degrees from Valley Forge Military College, Johns Hopkins University, and Wolfson College, Oxford, where he studied as a Rhodes scholar. He and his wife, Dawn Moore, have two children, Mia and James.
